Lecture 2 prep: Why does $V$ down cause $P$ up?

A container of volume $V$ is filled with a gas at 20 °C. If $V$ is decreased (while keeping $T$ constant), the pressure $P$ exerted by the gas on the walls of the container goes up ($P = n R T / V$). Why, in terms of kinetic molecular theory?